Confessions

It was nearing the end of the day and the gang were going to go back to their huts so they could rest for the Hiccup asked Astrid to stay behind for a bit longer.

Hiccup watched the other teens leave and leaned against a post. Astrid took a step closer and crossed her arms with a smirk on her face, and he looked back at her, a small sly grin worked onto his face that looked like he was up to something ,it made her insides melt.

"Soâ€¦what'd you and Heather do while I was gone?"

Astrid laughed. "That's what you kept me back here for? Just to ask me what me and Heather did today?" she laughed.

Hiccup shrugged. "Well," he chuckled, "maybe I just wanted to talk to you and see how your day has been." Astrid smiled at him, biting her lip. His grin was the most amazing thing Astrid could see,and the way his emeraled eyes glinted with an emotion she couldn't figure out whenever he looked at her it made her heart melt it was addicting. A sudden sick feeling twisted the pit of Astrid's stomach and her chest began to ache whenever he smiled at her like that.

Her thoughts reverted back to the chat she had with Heather earlier that day.

"You and Hiccupâ€¦so, you two are a thing, right?"

"What?! Pfft, no! Just. Friends."

Astrid found herself feeling uncomfortable somewhat, her emotions all jumbled up and confused so that she felt upset and disappointed and sad all at the same time.

Hiccup looked at her closer, noticing the way she her expression changed with her emotions. Concern etched lines across his freckled face that just a second ago was filled with mischief and admiration.

He took a few steps toward her gently. "Hey are you ok?"

"Huh what?" She refocused in on him, shaking her thoughts out of her head. "Oh yeah, no, I'm fine."

He pursed his lips and looked at her skeptically. "You sure?"

"Yeah."

"Because," he said slowly, "you seemâ€¦agitated? No, it has to be something elseâ€¦.., more like you have a lot on your mind."

Astrid looked at the ground and then up into Hiccup's eyes and nodded slightly.

Hiccup put his hands on her shoulders and bent down slightly to look at her. "Likeâ€¦like what?"

Astrid sighed. "It's justâ€¦Hiccup, what are we?"

He seemed taken aback. He blinked. "Wait what?"

Astrid stared into his eyes and told him, "Hiccup, Heather asked me today . Sheâ€¦" She took a deep breath,and sighed feeling a bit shaky and unsure what would happen if she told him. "She asked meâ€¦she asked me if weâ€¦were a thing."

Hiccup blinked again, his cheeks growing red. "Aâ€¦" He stammered and stumbled over his words, chuckling nervously. "A thing? As inâ€“"

Astrid locked eyes with him and nodded. "Yes, Hiccup," she said quietly. "As in boyfriend and girlfriend."

For a minute she thought she'd said something wrong. Hiccup hadn't responded and he seemed indifferent. Astrid bit her lip again and looked at the ground and sighed.

"Are we?" Hiccup asked quietly. Astrid looked back up at him. He bore an expression she couldn't read, one she'd never seen before. "Becauseâ€¦the past few years have been more like an awkward friendshipâ€¦"

"That's what I told her," Astrid said. "Thatâ€¦we were justâ€¦friends."

Hiccup looked at her. "Andâ€¦"

"And she didn't believe a word I said."

Hiccup put his hand to his forehead, rubbing it as he figured out the gist of it. "Are we really that obvious?" he asked after a moment. "Isâ€¦at leastâ€¦is my crush on you really that easy to see?"

"Hiccup, Heather's a smart girl so she can tell when something is going on.I'm pretty sure the others can also tell."

"Astrid, how is it not obvious? The least obvious thing about us is how close we are by sit next to each other and talk with each other ,and even in itself it's clear. No wonder she thinks we're together."

"And that's what we both want to know," Astrid said quietly.

"Are we together?" Hiccup finished for her. They locked eyes again. Now Astrid could read his emotions. He had a sort of pleading, eager look in his eyes that was mixed with an unconditional adoration for her.

Hiccup blinked and stammered, "I mean, um, if, uh, if you would want to,um, like if you want toâ€“"

Astrid rolled her eyes,and had a smirk on her face then she put a finger to his lips to hush him, and slipped her free hand into his. His cheeks were flaring now. Astrid hesitated. "Do you remember what I said earlier? Aboutâ€¦even though Heather's gone, I still have you?" Hiccup nodded. Astrid smiled at him. "This is what I was getting at when I said that."

Hiccup blinked and Astrid laughed.

"You didn't get that, did you?"He shook his head ."Boys," she chuckled.

She realized Hiccup was staring at her with that same adorable grin. He looked astounded and enamored with her. It was her turn to blink. "What? Is there something on my face?"

His cheeks reddened. "I'm sorry, I justâ€¦Astrid, you have the most beautiful laugh."

Astrid blushed. "Hiccup, Iâ€“"

"Astrid," Hiccup whispered. His hand drifted toward her cheek then her chin gently, tipping her head toward him and looking deeply into his emerald eyes that shone like stars. Astrid's throat ran dry and she swallowed, her heart fluttering in her chest. Hiccup flicked his eyes over her face and hesitated. "M-may I?"

Astrid understood what was going to happen and nodded slightly. Hiccup pulled her forward and kissed her on the lips tenderly. When he pulled away, he smiled. "Soâ€¦we are not just friends?"

"No." Astrid hugged him and pressed her face into his shoulder. "Like Heather said, we're a thing now and that's final."

"Well, when you think about it, we kinda have been a thing for the past year or so."

Astrid grinned. "Oh, shut it. We don't want the others to know about it."

Hiccup smiled at her and wrapped both arms around her waist and pulled her into a kiss.

Hiccup pulled away and looked at her lovingly but Astrid pulled him by the tunic to stop him from moving away.

Astrid looked deeply into his eyes and put her arms around his neck and kissed him but this time neither of them pulled just deepened the kiss. Astrid guided Hiccup's hands to her waist and placed them there.

It started raining and neither of them cared as long as they had each kissed under the rain until they noticed it was raining and they had to get inside.

The rain started to get heavier by the minute so they both had to find shelter. Luckily enough Hiccup's hut was not too far away from where they were standing.

Hiccup and Astrid ran for it and made it to the hut just in time.

Hiccup went to the fire pit and asked Toothless to start a fire for him and Astrid so they could keep gave Astrid spare clothes she could wear for bed so that she did not have to go back to her own hut and get her own clothes.

Astrid had to change so Hiccup had to turn around. Astrid did the same with Hiccup but as soon as he took his tunic off she felt like she was going to faint when she saw his bare chest.

Hiccup looked confused as to why Astrid has this surprised look on her face.

Astrid crawled onto Hiccup's bed and Hiccup did the same soon after.

Hiccup put a protective arm around Astrid while she laid her head on his chest. Astrid looked up and gave Hiccup a slow tender kiss on the lips.

"Goodnight Hiccup" Astrid said.

"Goodnight Milady" Hiccup said as he kissed her neck.

Through out the whole storm raging outside both Hiccup and Astrid stayed close to each other and forgot there was a storm raging they knew was that they are together and that nothing can break them apart.
